

Last Friday, May 26, 1950, electric power began flowing out of the generators at the Narrows dam near Murfreesboro.

This announcement by the U. S. Engineers yesterday spells a new chapter in the industrial and commercial life of Southwest Arkansas. The initial output was not so great—only 5 KW—but the capacity is estimated at 25 KW.

The Engineers aren't saying exactly how much power the new reservoir can produce, until the demand is fully ascertained. Only one generating unit has been installed so far but plans call for a second and third unit.

The Narrows dam is approximately 50 miles upstream from Hope, and the fact that this great new source of public power has come into a region which has two municipal electric systems—Hope and Prescott—leads to an obvious suggestion: Why not tie this public power into the municipal lines of both cities on a standby basis?

It is poor business for any town to stand absolutely alone where its electric supply is concerned, both from the viewpoint of public safety and of electric rates. Interconnected systems offer help in case of emergency, and bring in a cost figure that is below the capacity of an individual plant to meet.

Hope and Prescott, both being committed to municipal power, should find a natural ally in the publicly-owned generating plant at Murfreesboro. It should be a source of cheap power at the wholesale level, enabling both our towns to market electricity to local industries at a rate comparable to that of the privately-owned systems—something neither Hope nor Prescott can do at present.

In a very real sense, we have this job to do—inescapably. It's either a matter of tying up with the Narrows dam and providing cheap industrial power through the municipal plant, or granting an industrial power franchise to some private concern.

The new federal project at Murfreesboro has yet to be equipped with transmission lines, but running high-tension electric wires 50 to 100 miles is no great job—and it will be done. We'll see that it's done, won't we?

Jap Communists Call Strike in Defiance

Tokyo, June 1—(AP)—Openly defiant, Japan's Communist party today ordered a general strike Saturday in reprisal for the occupation's rush trial of eight Japanese accused of kicking and stoning American soldiers.

The strike call promised to bring to a head growing tension between General MacArthur's occupation and the belligerent Communists.

This tension, fueled by recent international Communist charges that the Japanese Reds were too docile, erupted Memorial day in the first physical violence of the occupation against U. S. troops.

A captain and four enlisted men, observers at a Communist anti-American rally in downtown Imperial plaza, were kicked, beaten and stoned. Only a few hours earlier, authorities had expelled the Communists from the plaza to permit Americans to hold Memorial day services for their war dead, including those who fell in the Pacific conflict against Japan.

MacArthur in a May speech urged the Japanese to defend their new constitutional liberties against the "international political perfidy" of communism. He suggested the possibility of ousting Japan's Communist party.

The Communist party howled that the Plaza incident were caused "by systematic and organized provocations by spies" and thumbed:

"Workers and students—rise up and start a general strike... demanding immediate release of the eight patriots."

It timed the reprisal strike to coincide with general strikes Saturday in the automobile, metal trades and heavy industry. The party's purpose in the latter is to influence the elections Sunday for the upper house of parliament.

Atlantic Union Organizers Meeting

W. B. MARLOW
Washington, June 1.—(AP)—About people from 40 states today began attending meeting here to plan for a union of the Western democracies. An Atlantic Union, it will be called.

They'll go up to the capitol to meet their representatives and others to help them push, although a number already support it. And they'll swap ideas on how to get more people back interested.

They've worked a number of publicity parades, meetings, even household actions, to people together. Those 125,000 are members of what is called the Atlantic union committee.

The committee claims a county membership of 25,000 people.

What they want is a union of the democratic nations under one central government.

Owen J. Roberts, former Supreme court justice, is president of the committee. Its two vice presidents are Will Clayton, for-

You Can Cut The Cost of Living

There is something you can do about cutting the family food bill... you can do like millions of other American families and save money as well as eat better with a frozen food locker.

If you live on a farm, you can store your own meat, vegetables, fruits, and poultry until needed. If you live in town, you can purchase meat at wholesale, have it processed and placed in your locker. You can buy fruits, vegetables, and other frozen foods at low quantity prices.

With a frozen food locker you can do many without lowering your standards. Drop in our plant tomorrow and learn more about the modern way of preserving food. You'll find us friendly and ready to be of service to you.

inter-Undersecretary of state, and Robert H. Patterson, former secretary of war.

The board of directors includes Clarence Snel, who has crusaded for his idea for years.

It grew in his mind when he was a newspaperman in Geneva in 1933 and watched the League of Nations fall apart. By 1939 he quit newspapering to devote all his time to the idea and in that year brought out his book, still being reprinted, "union now."

He kept on banging away. Last year, as times grew tense, and the Western democracies faced an aggressive Russia, Justice Roberts called a meeting which resulted in committee.

formation of the Atlantic Union. What does this committee want? Its members stress they do not want a one-world government now. They say they want to start with a union of the democracies, with other nations admitted as they become democracies.

The sponsors of this idea took upon it as a necessary step to end friction between the Western nations, bind them together, and through their united strength, preserve not only peace but democracy itself.

How would they go about it? They want congress to approve a resolution, now pending in both houses, which would authorize President Truman to do this.

Invite the democracies which sponsored the Atlantic pact last year—U. S., Britain, Canada, France, Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg—to send delegates to a convention. Any other democracies which wanted to send delegates could.

The delegates could do one of two things:

1. Just sit around exchanging ideas. They found their people approve an union and return home to see how their people felt toward the idea. If they found their people approved, a second convention could be called to set up the democratic union.

2. Or—these delegates at the first meeting could if they agreed on the idea, set up the plans for this super-government. It wouldn't come into existence, of course, until it was submitted to their own people for approval. A country whose people rejected it, wouldn't join.

(In this country, for instance, the American people themselves, not just congress, undoubtedly would have to approve before the U. S. would join such a single, over-all government.)

How would such a union government look? Perhaps like this: It would have a president; two houses of congress, a Supreme court. This would be the supreme government. Each of the member nations would vote on the president and elect the union nations would be citizens of congress. The citizens of all the member nations would be citizens of the one government.

None of this can ever get started.

Further, there'd be one currency for all the members, one postal system. Trade barriers, such as tariffs, would be wiped out and so on.

None of this can ever get started unless congress approves the resolution telling the president to start the ball rolling. And there's no indication congress intends to do so. At least, not this year.

Further, the union committee has run into a big stumbling block in the state department: It has urged congress not to bring up the resolution. Why? For one thing, it says the American people are not now sufficiently informed on the idea and what it involves.

What are some of the objections?

It would mean the U. S., which has remained independent and free of any dictation from any other country, would have to give up big part of its sovereignty, or independence, and abide by what the super-government decided; American business would be hurt if trade barriers were wiped out; and so on.

The objectors, and there are plenty, have plenty of objections.

Democrats Are Pleased With Acheson

Washington, June 1.—(AP)—Secretary of State Acheson's question and answer session with congress pleased Democrats but left Republicans cold today.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, told reporters

he thinks Acheson's appearance helped cement friendly relations between the state department and congress.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, said, on the contrary, he doesn't think that yesterday's unusual meeting in the library of congress auditorium "changed anything, one way or the other."

Rep. Arends (R-Ill.) said Acheson left a lot of questions unanswered.

Acheson's real test of his relations with the legislators will come with an appearance before the Senate foreign relations and armed services committees tomorrow on the foreign arms program. Wherry and Atlantic pact nations.

He talked yesterday of the need for this country to take the lead in strengthening the collective military forces of the United States and other foreign ministers. Lucas said he was pleased with the proceedings.

"He says we are going to go into full partnership with the North Atlantic treaty nations. We'll find out what we are going to have to give up and what it will cost us when he unfolds the foreign arms program, I suppose."

Acheson is expected to propose that this country spend $1,225,000,000 in a second year effort to help Western Europe rearm against the threat of communism.

Arkansas Has Record Tax Collection

Little Rock, June 1.—(AP)—Arkansas had a record $81,650,000 tax collection in the revenue year ended yesterday.

The previous record, set last year, was $78,073,364. Of the total for the year just closed, the general fund receives about $52,000,000.

Proceeds with British, French and other foreign ministers. Lucas said he was pleased with the proceedings.

Czech Envoy
May Be Given
U. S. Asylum

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, June 1 — (AP) — Responsible officials predicted today that the American government will grant political asylum to Vladimir Communist Czechoslovakia.

Informants said a decision to that effect had been tentatively worked out by the state and justice departments.

The case has caused considerable difficulties because the government has evidence that Houdek is a Communist of long standing. He asked for asylum May 16, after resigning as Czechoslovakia's chief delegate to the United Nations and blasting Russia for pressuring his homeland.

American law bars alien Communists from taking up residence in this country except in cases where the attorney general exercises discretionary power to permit a Communist to settle here.

Authorities said no such case involving a political refugee had arisen in the postwar years until Houdek came forth.

At the time Houdek resigned he was attacked by Papanek who said that Houdek had been recalled by the Communist regime he served in order to be purged. Papanek charged Houdek was resigning because he knew he would be arrested if he went home.

Houdek was known as a protege of Vladimir Clementis, who was ousted March 14 as the Czech foreign minister and since has dropped from sight.

In considering Houdek's case, American officials have been torn between the fact that he was a Communist and the fact that the United States traditionally admits political refugees to asylum in this country.

American officials apparently were impressed by Houdek's public protest against the condition in which he said the Soviets have placed his country.

For this roomy six-passenger Sedan is the lowest-priced family-model Buick and the easiest to buy.

Only Buick has Dynaflow and with it goes:

HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (New F-263 engine in SUPER model) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD front-end, taper-through fenders, "double bubble" taillights • WIDE-ANGLE VISIBILITY, close-up road view both forward and back • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less overall length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube • WIDE ARRAY OF MODELS with Body by Fisher.

But it has all the basic qualities that make every Buick a standout.

Unmistakable smartness, for instance, in its tapering fenders and money-saving Multi-Guard front-end.

A bonnet full of Fireball straight-eight power that spells thrills with real thrill.

Matchless Buick ride compounded of coil springs on all four wheels, ride-steadying torque-tube, low-pressure tires and Safety-Ride rims.

You can even have Dynaflow Drive*

Brown Enters SW Duel of Champions

Joplin, Mo., June 1 — (AP) — An inquest into the mysterious death of Miss Gwendolyn Creekmore in her Joplin mansion wound up last night without a verdict.

A coroner's jury, acknowledging it was baffled, adjourned until it receives tests of the vital organs of the 49-year-old woman, adopted daughter of a wealthy Oklahoma oilman.

The burned and beaten body of Miss Creekmore, a divorcee, was found Sunday.

Lee Moxley, 43, a friend of Miss Creekmore, was released by police on orders of Dale Tourtelot, prosecuting attorney. Moxley was given lie detector tests yesterday, but they failed to connect him in any way with her death.

Police Chief Roy Isgrigg said he would press the investigation from a different angle.

Dr. W. W. Hurst, the coroner, mentioned a folded girdle as an example of the puzzle in the case. The girdle was found folded in a clothes hamper in the bathroom of Miss Creekmore's home.

Yet an autopsy showed the girdle had protected part of her body from burns. Miss Creekmore, a divorcee, was found burned and beaten Sunday night after she failed to keep an appointment.

Dr. Hurst said that mercuriochrome was found in her stomach and kidneys. Yet there were no mercuriochrome stains on her hands or wrists.

The Southwest will have Otha Byrd of Rice and Lowell Hawkinson of Texas in the half-mile but neither third-place Jim Hoff of Rice nor fourth-place Dick Brooks of Texas will compete here.

In the two-mile run James Brown, Hot Springs, Arkansas, the first place winner, will participate and Normal Albrook of Baylor, who finished fourth, was invited and is expected to compete. Bill Milburn of Texas will substitute for third-place Randall Clay of Texas in the discus throw, working with George Kaderka of Texas. A. and M. and Jack Atkinson of Southern Methodist. In the broad jump, Jim Gerhardt of Rice, who finished third, will not compete, leaving the Southwest with only two entries—Charles Meeks of Texas and Jack Lucas of Baylor.

McCellan Now Satisfied With New Plan

Washington, June 1 — (AP) — President Truman's change in the name softened senate opposition today to a proposed new government department of health, education and security.

However, the probability that Oscar R. Ewing would become the first secretary of such a department revived some of the opposition which killed a similar reorganization plan last year.

At that time, Mr. Truman proposed a new department of welfare. Opponents clubbed it down in a 60 to 32 senate vote last August 16 largely on the grounds that it would give too much power to Ewing, the federal security administrator.

Ewing's support of the President's proposal for compulsory health insurance was a focal point in that fight and remains a sore spot among critics now.

Senator McClellan (D-Ark.), who attacked last year's plan on the grounds that it seemed to open the way for what he called "socialized medicine," said the new proposal looks satisfactory to him on that point.

McClellan heads the senate expenditures committee which will hold hearings if any resolution disapproving the new plan is offered. A majority of the full membership of either house can kill a reorganization plan.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, said he thinks there will be opposition to the new plan. He said Republicans aren't particularly interested in helping give cabinet status to Ewing, who is talked as a possible Democratic candidate for governor of New York.

If the plan survives an expected senate challenge, Ewing may become a department head with what the President himself said are "essentially the same duties and authority as are now vested in the federal security administrator."

In yesterday's message to congress submitting the plan, the President said that the surgeon general and the commissioner of education will "retain all the statutory authority and duties now vested in them."

Mother Attempts to End Life of Daughter

New York, June 1 — (AP) — An 8-year-old girl, Tom, was shot in the head by her mother, Anna, who pushed her around the way I was. The mother did not elaborate.

The little girl, Tom, daughter of an Irish-German mother and Chinese father, was in critical condition at Bellevue hospital.

The mother, Mrs. Emma Rose Curtis Tom, was booked on charges of felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan Weapons law.

Mrs. Tom, a blonde with shoulder-length hair, said she was born and reared in Yeadon, Pa. The child's father, Jimmie Tom, is employed as a waiter at a Bronx Chinese restaurant.

The woman said she and Tom were married in 1942 and have been estranged recently. However, she said, the family of three went to a movie yesterday.

Kansas City to Celebrate Centennial

Kansas City, June 1 — (AP) — The battle for Kansas City's centennial has been almost as rugged as the famous Civil War battle of Westport here. But pardner, come Saturday, it looks like a victory.

That day Kansas City officially will be 10 years old. And Kansas City is all set to celebrate.

It is going to tell its story how it began as a little Missouri river trading post, a wagon train stop, and became important through cattle, grain, rails and industry.

It is giving its biggest spectacle. It starts Saturday in a specially built outdoor theater which includes the parking lots, covers 27 acres. The show, with a cast of 1,200, is set for a 32-day run with fireworks every night depicting such scenes as the battle of Westport, port have something in common. Neither was easy pickings. At Westport, later annexed by Kansas City, Confederate General Sterling Price's westward advance was stopped. What the centennial does remains to be seen.

But, like Westport, the centennial has had its troubles. There have been money troubles; complicity by some townsmen; snide remarks by neighboring towns about gangland killings, and even beard and Indian troubles.

The birthday party — that includes the spectacle and side attractions — started out to be a million-dollar affair. But bashful financial backing quickly moved it down to $650,000 and finally to $400,000.

What is ultimately needed is a world-wide union including as many nations as can be incorporated

Two of Truman Appointments Are Approved

Washington, June 1 — (AP) — Two of President Truman's latest nominations for important administration posts were approved unanimously today by the Senate banking committee.

They are:

Edward Lee Norton, Birmingham, Ala., investment banker and radio station owner, for a 14-year term to the Federal Reserve Board of Governors at $10,000 a year.

Roy Blugh, Chicago university professor and former government tax expert, for the vacant third place as one of the President's economic advisers at $13,000 annually.

The senator told delegates from within it in the near future and including, someday, all the nations of the earth," the Iowan declared. Gillette said he had once actually debated against the idea with the committee's president, former associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court. "Times and the world have changed since then," Gillette said, and so has he.

The senator told delegates from 25 states that he had voted reluctantly for the North Atlantic alliance and had voted against military aid to Western Europe. But when the latter was voted and, as he put it, thus helped divide the world into two opposing camps, he said he accepted the Atlantic union proposal as a means of turning the military pact into an instrument of peace. "I believe that through a constitutional convention of at least the Atlantic democracies, the military alliance could be transformed into a steadily growing and widening federation of democratic peoples," he explained.

Acceptance of Atlantic Pact Is Urged

Washington, June 1 — (AP) — Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) today declared himself a convert to the proposed Atlantic Union. He said he could turn what he called the militaristic Atlantic pact into "a great coalition for world peace."

Gillette in an address prepared for the first luncheon session of a two-day meeting of the Atlantic Union Committee, Inc., said he is "astonished" at the reluctance of the administration to embrace the idea of a transatlantic federation of democracies.

"What is ultimately needed is a

Lookouts Are Awaiting Bonus Baby

By The Associated Press

Chattanooga is awaiting the arrival of onetime bonus boy Frank Quinn, a right-hander once worth $50,000 — a price the entire team of Lookouts probably wouldn't bring with their present seventh-place standing.

Quinn got his bonus price from the Boston Red Sox when he graduated from Yale in 1948. The 23-year-old hurler was sent to Birmingham where he compiled a 5-2 record.

Last year the "old blue-pitched" in 11 relief assignments for Boston but received no decisions and this year the Washington Senators picked him up for the waiver price and optioned him to Chattanooga. He was expected to arrive Thursday.

Mobile's Bears were dropped into fifth place Wednesday night when Memphis defeated them 3-2 in the Southern association's only game.

HE'S AT IT AGAIN

Oren Harris never was noted for telling the truth. Now that he's getting worried about re-election, he's at it again.

He says he won by 8,000 votes over two opponents in 1948. The facts are: the margin was less than half that.

Mother's Boy

Dear Miss Dix I am soon to be married to a man with whom I am deeply in love. He is everything that a woman could ask for, clever, ambitious, dependable, loyal, and fine. But he is a cinder-ord boy whose mother has dominated him all of his life and she is still the center of his life. He jumps at her beck and call. Waits on her hand and foot. Anticipates her every desire. He is 29, but he is still a little boy where she is concerned.

Now, what is my mental attitude going to be toward this man after we marry? How am I going to like his mother being put

The one run for the Chicks came when Outfielder Bill Higdon stretched a bunt into round trip in the third inning.

Mobile Third Baseman Walt Rogers scooped up the bunt and fired it over the head of Loy Ruchser at first. Ruchser then regained the ball and shot it to Shortstop Fred Postle who let it get by him. By the time the infield people was over, Higdon was free.

Thursday night's games: Mobile at Chattanooga, Atlanta at Little Rock, Birmingham at Memphis, New Orleans at Nashville.

Willies, but if they are business girls who have to punch the time clock at 9, they will soon lose their good looks and their youth if they are deprived of their proper amount of sleep.

Don't be afraid to make decent and reasonable rules about the hours your daughters keep. The kind of men that you want your daughters to marry will respect you for it. Nothing enhances a girl's value in a man's eyes more than to have a mother who looks after her.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Do you think that a good son makes a good husband, but that is only true when the son isn't too good a son. Otherwise he is the worst husband in the world.

Incurable

The greatest drawback to marriage that a man can possibly possess is to have a mother complex. For when he has that he is joined to his idol and no mere wife can ever separate him from her. And the man with the mother complex is incurable because he accounts his weakness for righteously. He has mother-worship bred in his bones because from his very babyhood his mother has impressed upon him his duty to her. So he feels that he is doing nothing more that his duty in not only sacrificing himself to mother but also offering up his wife and children on her altar.

So there you are and you had as well face the facts honestly and courageously before marriage. You will never be able to wean your husband away from his mother, because if a man has not cut his mother's apron strings before he is 29 years old he will never cut them. There is no way in which a wife can combat the mother complex in her husband because he attributes everything she says to jealousy. There is no arguing with a mother's boy husband, anyway, because with him Mother is always right and wife is always wrong.

There is just one of two things that the girl can do who is confronted with the problem of marrying a man with the mothercomplex. She can give him up or else she can make up her mind to be content with a second mortgage on his heart rather than have no place in it at all.

Dear Miss Dix: I have two beautiful and charming daughters 22 and 20 years of age. It has been the rule in our household that 1 A.M. is long enough for young men to stay when they come three or four times a week. Parties or dances, of course, make the hours different. Lately two young men have been coming to see the girls who insist on staying until 2 or 3:30, and when my daughters told them of my 1 o'clock rule they were so offended that they have not been back since, and I am being blamed for the unpleasant situation. What do you think is the proper time for a young man to leave when calling upon a girl?

Anxious Mother

Answer: I should think that 12 o'clock would be the limit of human endurance for both the caller and the callee, and that even before that time they must have been yawning in each other's faces. Certainly any young man who thinks that he can keep a girl entertained until 2:30 in the morning must have superiority complex developed to the nth degree. If your daughters have nothing else to do but sleep until noon, they can perhaps endure the marathon calls of these never - go - home girls.

Answer: I should think that 12 o'clock would be the limit of human endurance for both the caller and the callee, and that even before that time they must have been yawning in each other's faces. Certainly any young man who thinks that he can keep a girl entertained until 2:30 in the morning must have superiority complex developed to the nth degree.

If your daughters have nothing else to do but sleep until noon, they can perhaps endure the marathon calls of these never - go - home girls.

Fair Enough

When the jury disagreed in the lawsuit of Paul Draper and Larry Adler against Mrs. John T. McCullough, Draper said: "In the present climate of public opinion, the failure of this jury to be convinced of the truth of the charges against us is vindication of our loyalty."

I disagree. Draper and Adler failed to convince the jury that a Mrs. McCullough's charges were false. And, inasmuch as this pair have insisted that their loyalty was impugned, it appears to me that the cloud has not been dispelled. They tried hard to dispel it.
They would seem to have spent a great deal of money on their lawsuit, though they claimed to be on their uppers by reason of a popular boycott against their tavern entertainment. How they came by the money to pay for all this I have a legitimate wish to know, when they were so hard up that Draper had to move from New York to Ridgefield, Conn., to economize and Adler had to leave his progeny in Paris for the same reason.

The pity of their situation leaves me almost unmoved, however, when I compare it with the actual suffering that Hester McCullough had to endure. I am instantly reminded of the pitiless application of the cruel Connecticut law of attachment against the McCulloughs' home and bank account and the jeopardy which these two plaintiffs knowingly imposed against the education and the future of their only son.

After all, as the evidence and the disagreement plainly show,
Mrs. McCullough's charges were not gratuitous and malicious but were prompted by past performances and associations of Draper and Adler. They were uttered in a spirit of intense loyalty to the United States and detestation of the enemy which has been recognized by President Truman himself. By their own determined course, continuing over a period of years, Draper and Adler gave Mrs. McCullough to suspect them of political leanings which, by their own admission, would be heinous. The jury's failure to vindicate them of the imputations leaves those imputations as valid as they were the day they filed their suits and needlessly attached the McCulloughs' home and the money for their current bills, including taxes.

I observe that the judge, J. Joseph Smith, a politician who served the New Deal in congress, deemed it legal and just to withhold from the jury the facts of this attachment, although it was inherent in the lawsuit and was from the legal standpoint, not cruel, malicious nor shameful but strictly proper. I still trust that the reasoning of New Deal judges is not partial to litigants of the same political persuasion. If this attachment was legal and proper, and nobody suggested that it wasn't, then why would it have been improper to let the jury know all about it. Or might a jury of average Americans in modest circumstances have thought that Draper and Adler rubbed it in? They didn't have to inflict this extra hurt. But they did so, just the same.

They were asking for $200,000 to repair damage to their reputation and earning powers. The most optimistic appraisal of John McCullough's earnings and his future would suggest that they would have condemned the McCulloughs to economic slavery for the rest of their lives. The costs of the lawsuit alone amounted to about $30, 000, all raised by patriotic, public wretched patriots might have had to deny themselves all but the most essential necessities to pay the $200,000 judgment. Perhaps in 30 or 40 years they would have been able to pay off, meanwhile denied the hope of educating their children.

Draper and Adler were allowed to call upon the juror's sympathy for their children, whose condition, at worst, seemed not too bad.
Draper, for example, said that, notwithstanding the cruel boycott,
he still could afford a governess.
The McCulloughs never had a governess. And, during the very time when Draper was bewailing his poverty, the McCulloughs' boy was running a very high fever to the great anxiety of his mother, but he had no nurse. They couldn't afford one. Two neighbors took turns caring for the boy. An appeal for sympathy on this account would have been improper altho Draper and Adler were allowed to exploit the want of their children to the last twinge of pathos.

Ridgefield, Conn., is not a country club. It is no less expensive than New York, all things considhas drawn a strange new clientele.

Ark Senate Action on Rent Control

Washington, June 1 — (AP) — Sen. John Douglas (D-Ill) said today he is taking immediate action by the Senate banking committee on rent control extension.

Chairman Maybank (D-SC) of the committee told a reporter he would "ask for a discussion of what we are to do on rent control at our committee session today."

Both Douglas and Democratic Leader Lucas, also of Illinois, have been pressing Maybank for favorable action on the extension bill because of numerous requests from back home.

Lucas, who faces a hot reelection campaign, is the author of a bill that would extend existing federal rent ceilings for another year. Unless extended they will expire June 24.

Senators opposed to extending rent control have been urging Maybank to delay action until the committee until the house had acted, which will be June 12 or later.

"I'm ashamed I caused so much commotion," he said as he sat down. "But I just wanted to go

Mental Patient
Recaptured
With Apology

Napa, Calif., June 1 (AP) — Edmund Whiffield's fourth escape from a state mental hospital ended quietly late yesterday — with an apology.

Deputy Sheriffs Paul Hartman and Tim Linehan found the 25-year old former University of Southern California athlete beside a country road five miles east of Napa.

Whiffield described by hospital officials as dangerous, climbed quickly into the deputies' car.

"I'm ashamed I caused so much commotion," he said as he sat down. "But I just wanted to go

Capture of the six-foot-four, 180 pound Negro ended as search of almost 24 hours in the hills around this northern California vineyard center.

The former USC junior varsity slipped through an unguarded door Tuesday morning and ran away from pursuing attendants into the countryside.

The Napa county sheriff's office told searchers he could live in the bushy woods for weeks if he could find food.

It was Whiffield's fourth escape. Previously, he had broken out of Camarillo State hospital in Ventura county three times.

Whiffield, husband of a white girl, pleaded with his captors for a transfer back to Camarillo so he could be near his Los Angeles home.

School to Move

Batesville, June 1 (AP) — The main plant of Arkansas college will move from its present site to the 100-acre former Masonic home property here.

Dr. John Spraggins, Arkansas college president, said the move had been decided on by the board of trustees. He said a new dormitory for women will be constructed. Present large buildings on the new site will be remodeled for classrooms.

Other property of the college will be sold.

The LONESOME BRIDE

By Grace Nies Fletcher

THE STORY After Gloria Benoit failed to bring apple pie to the apartment of Mrs. Brown next door, two people are murdered. Gloria's husband is killed and the housekeeper becomes active. Mrs. Benoit's husband, the apartment house doorman, and another man exchange the pie for Mrs. Benoit's. Meanwhile, Gloria learns from Lieutenant McGann of homicide that Sam, a sister of Allan Strong, victim whose $20,000 necklace was stolen. Gloria discovers that the stolen necklace is hidden in Mrs. Benoit's pie, which is in Gloria's icebox right now.

"I do not know what you're talking about," Gloria said coldly. "What evidence?" He'd called her "Mrs. Brown" instead of "Millie," so he must think this was serious.

"The lab has just turned in a full report about the sugar jar from your lunch basket."

"So what?" Gloria asked, puzzled.

"It is half heroin!" He hung up.

HEROIN! Dope. Gloria sat there, her hand frozen to the receiver, clutching the towel about her, unable to speak. Who could have done this awful thing to her? And why? That settled it; she could never tell the police about the necklace now; they wouldn't believe a syllable of it. The best thing to do was to get rid of it, fast.

She started to get up, dress, do something about getting rid of the necklace, when the phone rang again. This time it was Reuben, the doorman, telling her three reporters were down in the lobby to see her. Already. They must have gotten a hot tip from the lieutenant who no longer believed there was even a half-doubt about Millie's innocence.

But Gloria was too shaken just now by this awful dope business to cross her knees and beam faintly; she'd do that tomorrow if she had to.

"I am not at home to anyone," Gloria said coldly and banged down the receiver. Maybe now she could get into something more than a towel. But the day was getting hotter by the minute and when it gets hot in Brooklyn, it stews. Already the white brick walls of the court outside her window were like the four sides of

But that was exactly what Gloria might have done, if she hadn't known that the jewels were in the pie! It must have been the Benoit's.

The only other possibility was the mysterious and sinister Loft Gordon whom she couldn't seem to believe in without seeing. Why was he called "Lofty"? A tall man, very strong, who'd been quick as lightning doubling up the body of Jack the Cork, getting away with murder — so far at least — with the police watching the very building!

The telephone brought her, dripping, out onto the bath mat, among its other duties, the U. S. Coast Guard provides vital weather information to ships and airplanes.

a furnace, focusing heat. She chose her shortest pair of shorts and a flowered bra because with reporters around, she couldn't go outside until after dark.

But was she going to get out unseen tonight to take the jewels to Tony the Fruitman's, with flocks of reporters snooping about, not to mention the police in general and Hansen in particular? She had barely time to don her scanty raiment when the phone rang again. It was long distance.

"Gloria, are you all right?" Colonel Perkins' voice demanded, crisply. "A reporter from a Boston paper just called me. I'll sue them for slander," her parent raged. "It'll be spread all over that blankety-blank sheet this afternoon."

"I'm sorry, father," Gloria murmured meekly.

"I am taking the next plane."

"No! Please don't, Father!" Gloria had enough complications now without him arriving, suing for slander all over the place. He'd be one more to evade tonight. "I have things to do." She waited, panicky, for him to snort, "Nonsense!" but strangely he didn't.

It had been one of his strictest rules by which he had brought up his family that everyone had a right to his own reticences. "Even a child is an individual and should be treated as such," he had insisted.

"Very well," the colonel said stiffly. "There was an awkward pause and then he asked, "You need any money?"

"Five hundred would help," she admitted. "I don't know how much the lawyer will charge."

"A thousand would be better." His generosity touched her deeply for she knew he had more pride than cash.

"Thank you, dear," she murmured.

"Goodby, daughter."

This unwonted note of affection was the last straw that broke her self control; she hung up the phone, leaped her bright head on her arms and burst into tears, sobbing uncontrollably.

Johnson Asks Continuation of the Draft

Washington, June 1 — (AP) — Secretary of Defense Johnson pleaded with Congress today to give President Truman power to draft men into the armed services in time of emergency.

He won partial support from Senator Knowland (R-Calif), who said he is changing his views because of what he called the possibility of an atomic attack on the United States.

Johnson asked the Senate Armed Services Committee for a three-year extension of the draft act without a house-approved section leaving up to Congress alone when any inductions could take place.

"If trouble comes, there should be in the commander-in-chief the power to act immediately without waiting to reassemble Congress," Johnson's aid in expanding on a prepared statement he had read to the committee.

Knowland told Johnson he originally had favored the house version but now thinks some other arrangement is necessary.

"If the city of Washington were contaminated by atomic attack, the capitol couldn't be moved without congressional approval," Knowland said.

He added that if an atomic explosion wiped out most of Congress, the Senate could be replaced by appointments made by governors. But he said it might take 60 days or more to hold special elections to obtain enough new house members to transact business.

Johnson said extension of the draft act is necessary to keep the United States "in a state of alert" against possible attack.

Johnson told the Senate Armed Services Committee numerous "incidents" in the cold war — including the Russian atomic explosion — make it necessary for this country's armed forces to be in a state of readiness.

Bus Service
Back to Normal in Columbus

Columbus, O., June 1 — (AP) — Bus service was back to normal today following a one-day operators' walkout that made many late for work and kept thousands of shoppers away from Columbus downtown stores.

Decision to end yesterday's walkout was reached late last night at a meeting of about 5 of the 600 members of Local 208 of the United Transport Workers (CIO).

The strike action had been voted for midnight Tuesday as a protest against a 10-day suspension of an operator by the Columbus Transit Co. One-half hour before the strike deadline Mayor James A. Rhodes' office announced the strike had been postponed for two weeks.

But the walkout of the bus and trackless trolley operators went off as scheduled and the question of whether the men should return to work was delayed until last night's meeting.

John Robert Tipton, local international representative of the UTW, said the strike was lifted "in behalf of the bus-riding public." He said the union would push its fight against the suspensions "without fair hearing."
